CONTROLLER OF COUNTY ACCOUNTS,
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, Jan. 15, 1919.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives.

In compliance with section 1 of chapter 211 of the Acts of 1905 I have the honor to present the thirty-second annual report of this department, covering the year ending Dec. 31, 1918.

IN GENERAL.

The duties of the department have been considerably increased by legislation of last year providing for authority over the accounts of the county tuberculosis hospitals. The war has interfered with the construction of several of the larger institutions, but once completed the supervision of their accounts will require a great deal of time and attention.

Although the law provides for one examination a year of each office under the controller's charge, in the case of several of the larger offices, as in 1916 and 1917, more frequent examinations have been made. This is advisable, because if there are corrections to be made it is much easier for all concerned that they should be made as soon as possible. There have been the usual installations of books of account, partial examinations, consultations with and instructions to county officers, and closing of accounts.

COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS.

As stated in last year's annual report of this department many conferences, with reference to county tuberculosis hospitals, were held with the Attorney-General's department. The result was that considerable new legislation was made. The general act, chapter 286 of the General Acts of 1916, amended by chapters 103 and 251 of the General Acts of 1917, was amended by chapter 80 of the General Acts of 1918, and the disputed question of maintenance of the hospitals established under general laws settled. The maintenance of those operating under special acts — Barnstable and Hampshire hospitals — was otherwise provided for. The accounts of all these hospitals were placed under the supervision of this department by chapter 163 of the General Acts of 1918. The installation of a system of accounting has been effected in those now in operation.

PROBATION OFFICERS.

Probation officers' accounts, to which this department has devoted much time and attention, are in very much better shape. A system of monthly trial balances has been installed, and although the result has not yet been ascertained in all the offices, still the system will undoubtedly bring about greater correctness and more up-to-date accounts.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Although the department has frequently consulted the Attorney-General's office with reference to the proper interpretation of questions of law, but three written opinions have been sought. These have to do with chapter 240 of the General Acts of 1918, — An Act establishing minimum salaries for officers in county penal institutions, — and chapter 260 of the same year, — An Act to authorize a temporary increase in the compensation of certain employees of the counties. A multitude of questions arose in connection with these acts. The opinions, of great interest throughout the counties, follow: —

BOSTON, July 10, 1918.

MR. FRANK L. DEAN, Controller of County Accounts.

DEAR SIR: — You have requested my opinion as to what persons come within the scope of section 2 of chapter 240 of the General Acts of 1918, which establishes certain minimum salaries for "officers who have been in the prison service of the several counties of the commonwealth for" specified periods of years.

By R. L., c. 224, § 16, the following provision is made for the appointment of subordinates in jails and houses of correction:—

The jailer, master or keeper shall appoint subordinate assistants, employees and officers, and shall be responsible for them.

Section 18 of that chapter provides:—

The county commissioners shall establish fixed salaries for all officers, assistants and employees of jails and houses of correction.

These quotations seem plainly to indicate that all employees in the prison service, subordinate to the master or keeper, are not to be regarded as officers. They are described as “subordinate assistants, employees and officers.” The statute under consideration establishing minimum salaries expressly applies only to officers.

My predecessor, the Honorable Thomas J. Boynton had occasion to consider the question as to what persons were officers or instructors in the prison service within the meaning of St. 1908, c. 601, as amended by St. 1911, c. 673, providing for the retirement of such officers and instructors and the granting of pensions to them. In an opinion dated Sept. 24, 1914, directed to the chairman of the Board of Retirement, he ruled that a carpenter, a mechanic and a mason, whose regular duties did not appear to require them to have charge of any prisoners, were not officers or instructors within the meaning of this statute. He defined officers of a prison to mean “those persons who are employed to, and who as a regular part of their duties do, have charge either of all or a definite number of persons committed to the prison, jail or reformatory by legal process.” This seems to me to be an appropriate definition of the term, and, in my opinion, it should be employed in determining who are officers in the prison service within the meaning of the statute under consideration. It necessarily becomes a question of fact in each individual case, as to whether the particular employee, as a regular part of his duties, has charge of some or all of the prisoners. This question of fact must be decided, in the first instance at least, by the county treasurer, whose duty it is to pay the salaries established by this act. In my opinion, in performing the duties intrusted to you by law, you ought not to question a determination of this character once made by him unless you are satisfied that it is plainly wrong.

If an employee is appointed and carried on the pay roll as an officer, that fact may, prima facie, entitle him to the benefits of this statute though it is not conclusive. Calling a clerk an officer, of course, cannot make him such. Nor does the fact that an employee may occasionally, as an incidental part of his work, have some supervision over a few of the prisoners who are assigned to work in his department make him an officer. It must be a regular and substantial part of his duty to have charge and control of prisoners in order to bring him within the definition of prison officers to which I have referred. Thus, the engineers, assistant engineers and stewards or cooks cannot, in my opinion, be regarded as officers, merely because prisoners are from time to time assigned to work in their departments under their direction. Again, persons appointed as, and in the main performing the duties of, clerks are not officers unless, in addition, they perform substantial duties of the character indicated in this definition of prison officers.

The question whether matrons come within the terms of this statute is a matter of some difficulty. From the facts furnished me, apparently they perform, with reference to the female prisoners, much the same duties that are performed with regard to the male prisoners by some of the persons who are plainly prison officers. There appears, however, to be no provision in the statute expressly authorizing the appointment of matrons. They seem to be appointed under the general authority to appoint subordinate assistants and employees. So far as the matter has been called to my attention the compensation paid them is substantially less than that paid to any of the male employees prior to the enactment of this statute. In no county where the matter has been called to my attention are they paid more than $600 a year. In the county of Barnstable the matron receives but $100 a year. I cannot believe that by the enactment of this statute, and without referring definitely to these positions, the General Court intended to increase these salaries to a minimum of $1,000, increasing to a minimum of $1,400 in case of more than five years' service. I feel that I must advise you that these matrons do not come within the provisions of chapter 240.

Yours very truly,

HENRY C. ATTWILL,
Attorney-General.

BOSTON, July 26, 1918.

MR. FRANK L. DEAN, Controller of County Accounts.

DEAR SIR:— I beg to acknowledge your request for my opinion with regard to certain questions which have arisen as to the general scope and effect of chapter 260 of the General Acts of 1918, entitled "An Act to authorize a temporary increase in the compensation of certain employees of the counties of the commonwealth." Section 1 of that act is as follows:—

From and after the first day of July in the current year, all persons who are regularly in the employ of the several counties of the commonwealth whose annual compensation in full for all services rendered does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars and whose salaries have not been increased by act of the general court passed during the current year, shall, until further action of the general court relative to the standardization of the salaries of judicial and county officers and employees, receive additional temporary compensation equal to ten per cent of the salaries received by them on the first day of July in the year nineteen hundred and seventeen.

This applies to "all persons who are regularly in the employ of the several counties of the commonwealth" whose annual compensation does not exceed the sum specified. The chief difficulty in applying this statute is to determine the meaning of this language. It is not apt language to designate public officers. Furthermore, in a strict sense of the term few, if any, persons can be said to be "regularly in the employ of the several counties" in their corporate capacities. They are either public officers elected by the people of the counties, or public employees appointed by the county commissioners or other so-called county officials. It becomes necessary to examine with some detail the history of this act and of various other statutes that were enacted in connection with it.

In 1916 the Executive Council at the request of the General Court undertook an investigation and standardization of "salaries and compensations paid by the commonwealth and by the several counties, so far as they are established by the commonwealth." The report of the special committee of the Council upon this matter was submitted to the General Court this year as House Document No. 1175. Part I of this document was devoted to departmental and institutional officials and employees, and dealt strictly with officials and employees of the Commonwealth. Part II was devoted to judicial and county officials and employees. It considered chiefly the matter of compensation of judicial officers and various other public officers usually referred to as county officials. It paid little or no attention to minor employees.

This report was referred to the committee on public service. That committee, on March 21 (Senate, No. 316), submitted a report recommending the enactment of a statute based upon Part I of the report of the Executive Council. It also suggested that there was need of further investigation as to the salaries of judicial and county officers, and recommended that "the subject of salaries and compensation paid to judicial and county officials and employees and to all other officers and employees of the commonwealth other than those included in" the bill based upon Part I of the committee's report be referred to a special recess committee. The bill, reported by the committee, was subsequently enacted with some changes as chapter 228 of the General Acts of 1918. The matter of the order for a recess committee was recommended to the committee on public service.

On May 21 (Senate, No. 395) the committee on public service submitted a further report, stating in substance that after further investigation they had become convinced that thorough analysis and standardization of county and State offices and positions, not covered by the bill already reported, were essential. They say: "Furthermore, we have not gone sufficiently deep into the matter of compensation of county employees other than those elective and appointed officers specified in House, No. 1175. Investigation should be made of salaries of janitors, draw-tenders and other minor officials and employees."

The committee recommended five separate bills dealing with the salaries of specific officials. They repeated their recommendation for a recess committee to consider the salaries "paid to judicial and county officials and employees, and to all other officers and employees of the commonwealth or the counties thereof, elected or appointed, other than those included in" the bill recommended in their first report. They also reported "a temporary bill which makes an attempt in the meantime to offset the increase in the cost of living."

The five separate bills referred to subsequently became chapters 261, 263, 272, 284 and 287 of the General Acts of 1918, dealing with the salaries, respectively, of county commissioners, county treasurers, district attorneys, judges and registers of probate courts and clerks of court. The order for an investigation recommended by the committee was subsequently amended so as to impose the duty of investigation upon the Supervisor of Administration, and was enacted as chapter 86 of the Resolves of 1918. This resolve applies to "the judicial and all other officials and employees, appointive or elective, of the commonwealth, except in the department of legislation, and the several counties thereof, other than those included in senate document number three hundred and seventy of the present year." Senate Document No. 370 is the proposed bill which was subsequently enacted as Gen. St. 1918, c. 228, above referred to.

The temporary bill recommended by the committee was the original bill which formed the basis of the statute now under consideration. As first recommended, however, it applied to "all persons who are regularly in the employ of the commonwealth or of the counties thereof, as hereinafter specified." The persons specified were judges, registers and assistant registers of probate, assistant recorders of the Land Court, registers and assistant registers of deeds, sheriffs, medical examiners and justices, clerks and assistant clerks of district courts. The salaries of these officials, except those of the judges, registers and assistant registers of probate, are paid from the treasuries of the several counties. This bill was subsequently redrafted by the ways and means committee of the Senate so as to apply to "all persons who are regularly in the employ of the commonwealth or of the counties thereof" whose compensation did not exceed $2,500, without restriction. Still later, various changes in form were made, and the bill was again redrafted so as to apply to "all persons who are regularly in the employ of the several counties of the commonwealth" whose compensation did not exceed the specified sum, any reference to persons in the employ of the Commonwealth being eliminated. At the same time a second section was added establishing the salary of the justice of the district court of Dukes County, and a third section, dealing with the compensation of assistant recorders of the Land Court. In this form the bill was finally enacted. This temporary bill, the resolve for an investigation by the Supervisor of Administration, and four of the five special bills were all approved on May 31. Chapter 287 was approved on June 1.

From the history and language of the act under consideration and from the provisions of the other related legislation, particularly Resolve 86, I am led to the conclusion that it was the intention of the General Court, by the use in this statute of the words "all persons who are regularly in the employ of the several counties of the commonwealth," to designate as entitled to the proposed 10 per cent. increase all persons in the public service whose salaries are paid from the treasuries of the several counties. The specific reference in the bill first drawn to justices, clerks and assistant clerks of district courts, who are not strictly county officers but who are paid by the counties, and the addition at its final stage of section 2, establishing the salary of the justice of the district court of Dukes County, who is thus treated as an employee of a county within the scope of the statute as defined by its title, point to this conclusion. These suggestions, when considered together with the provision that the increase granted is to continue "until further action of the general court relative to the standardization of the salaries of judicial and county officers and employees," which it is contemplated will result from the investigation authorized by Resolve 86, and the statement in the report of the committee on public service that this temporary increase is granted "to offset the increased cost of living" pending the investigation, all seem to indicate that there was no intention to confine the benefits of this temporary bill to persons who are strictly county officers or employees. The language used is unfortunate and gives rise to disturbing doubts, but, on the whole, I am of opinion that the statute must be construed as granting increase of salary to all persons otherwise within its terms who are by authority of law paid their salaries from the treasuries of the several counties of the Commonwealth.

This statute is limited by its terms to persons otherwise within it "whose salaries have not been increased by act of the general court passed during the current year." Gen. St. 1918, c. 211, established the salaries of clerks of police, district and municipal courts at three-quarters of the salary received by the justice of their respective courts. This statute was made effective as of June 1, 1917. Gen. St. 1917, c. 340, established the salaries of these officials on the same basis, except that it provided that that act was to become effective upon acceptance by the respective county commissioners. I am informed that this 1917 statute was accepted by most, if not all, of the county commissioners at varying times before the enactment of Gen. St. 1918, c. 211. It follows that to the extent that the 1917 statute had been thus accepted by the county commissioners the 1918 statute did not grant an increase in salary, but merely provided back pay from June 1, 1917, to the date of such acceptance. In such cases it is not, in my judgment, to be regarded as an increase of salaries by the General Court during 1918 within the meaning of chapter 260 under discussion. If in any case the 1917 statute was not accepted by the county commissioners before the enactment of Gen. St. 1918, c. 211, in such cases the latter statute did actually increase existing salaries, and thus in such cases no increase can be allowed under chapter 260.

In my opinion, in no case are clerks of district courts entitled to three-quarters of the 10 per cent. increase granted by this statute to the judges of the district courts. They are entitled to an increase of 10 per cent. of their salaries as established on July 1, 1917, but to no further increase.

As the 10 per cent. increase granted by this statute is based upon "the salaries received by them on the first day of July in the year nineteen hundred and seventeen," it, in my opinion, applies only to persons who were in the service of the county, as herein defined on that date, and who have been regularly in its service since that time. It does not apply to persons appointed or employed after July 1, 1917.

The increase provided for by this statute, being based upon the salary received on July 1, 1917, is to be computed upon the amount which the officer or employee was entitled to receive at that time, and in no other manner. The increase is to be added to the salary which the officer or employee would have received but for the enactment of this statute. If his salary was readjusted in January, 1918, on the basis of the business of his office in 1917, as in the case of registers and assistant registers of deeds, the increase must be added, by the terms of the statute, to the readjusted salary of 1918. If in the case of salaries not fixed by act of the Legislature county commissioners, or other persons in authority, have granted increases subsequent to July 1, 1917, and prior to the enactment of this statute, its language seems to require the addition of the increase granted to such increased salaries. In other words, the increase is to be added to the salary actually established on July 1, 1918. It is to be noted, however, that if this last-mentioned result works a discrimination in any case, it is well within the power of the county commissioners or other constituted authority to withdraw increases granted during the year, in order that certain employees may not have the benefit of two increases within a year if such a result is not, in their opinion, justified.

Very truly yours,

HENRY C. ATTWILL,
Attorney-General.

BOSTON, Oct. 7, 1918.

FRANK L. DEAN, Esq., Controller of County Accounts.

DEAR SIR: — You have requested my opinion as to whether the justices, clerks and assistant clerks of the district courts, whose salaries were affected by Gen. St. 1918, c. 173, are entitled to the temporary increase in salary authorized by Gen. St. 1918, c. 260. By its terms the latter statute applies only to persons "whose salaries have not been increased by act of the general court passed during the current year," and the sole question is as to whether Gen. St. 1918, c. 173, is to be regarded as having granted such an increase in salary within this provision.

By Gen. St. 1917, c. 302, the territorial jurisdiction of various district and police courts was enlarged by annexing thereto one or more towns. This statute took effect on Oct. 1, 1917, but contained no provision relating to the salaries of the justices or clerks of these courts. The various police, district and municipal courts of the Commonwealth had been classified, and the salaries of their justices and clerks established on the basis of population, by St. 1904, c. 453, and this statute, with its various amendments, is still in force.

St. 1910, c. 501, provided that these salaries shall be readjusted on the first day of July in the year in which a national or State census is taken, so that thereafter the salaries shall be based upon the population of the district as shown by the latest enumeration.

As the statute of 1917, increasing the territorial jurisdiction of the courts in question, contained no provision increasing the salaries of the justices and clerks to correspond to the added population, it is plain that without further legislation they were not entitled to an increase in salary based on such added population until a readjustment should take place, in accordance with the statute of 1910, on the first day of July of the year in which the next national or State census is taken.

This being the situation, the General Court this year enacted Gen. St. 1918, c. 173, § 1 of which is as follows: —

The salaries of the justices, clerks and assistant clerks of the district, police and municipal courts whose judicial districts were enlarged by the provisions of chapter three hundred and two of the General Acts of nineteen hundred and seventeen, and the classes into which said courts are distributed under the provisions of chapter four hundred and fifty-three of the acts of nineteen hundred and four and the amendments thereof, shall be readjusted, by the officer paying said salaries, so as to correspond with the classes and salaries prescribed by said chapter four hundred and fifty-three and the amendments thereof. The readjustment shall be made as of October first, nineteen hundred and seventeen, and all increases of salary hereunder shall take effect as of that date.

In view of the statutes relating to salaries in the courts in question at the date of the enactment of this statute, it is my opinion that it can be regarded as having no other effect than granting an increase in salary to the justices, clerks and assistant clerks specified and providing for the payment of the increase from Oct. 1, 1917. In my judgment this is an increase in salary granted by act of the General Court, passed during the year 1918, and, accordingly, these justices and clerks do not come within the provisions of chapter 260 of the acts of this year.

You also ask my opinion as to whether court stenographers, who receive an annual salary of $2,500, are entitled to the benefits of Gen. St. 1918, c. 260.

This question arises from the fact that these stenographers are required by R. L., c. 165, § 85, at the request of the presiding justice, to provide him with a transcript of such portion of their notes as he may require, payment for such transcript to be made by the county. The result is that in cases where a stenographer is requested to perform any such additional work by the presiding justice he receives compensation from the county in excess of $2,500. The habits of the various presiding justices with regard to making such requests vary greatly, and it is impossible to determine in advance whether any particular stenographer during any year will receive compensation for such work, and, if so, to what extent.

Gen. St. 1918, c. 260, applies only to persons "whose annual compensation in full for all services rendered does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars." The temporary increase in salary granted is "equal to ten per cent. of the salaries received by them on the first day of July in the year nineteen hundred and seventeen." This appears to make the basis of the increase the rate of regular compensation received on that date. It does not permit the consideration of occasional extra compensation paid for additional work performed out of regular hours.

Regular salaries paid these stenographers appear to be compensation for the services rendered by them in taking notes and performing other incidental services during the sessions of the court. The furnishing of transcripts of evidence to presiding justices of necessity requires work out of regular court hours and frequently beyond regular business hours. Though it is not entirely free from doubt, it seems to me, on the whole, that it must be regarded as work performed in addition to the regular duties of the office. Because of the uncertainty of its extent, it is paid for in the manner above indicated. I am inclined to the opinion, therefore, that amounts received on account of such additional work are not to be considered in determining the annual compensation of such stenographers for the purpose of the application of Gen. St. 1918, c. 260.

Accordingly, in my judgment, stenographers, who merely receive additional compensation for furnishing transcripts of their notes to presiding justices, are not debarred thereby from the temporary increase authorized by this statute.

Yours very truly,

HENRY C. ATTWILL,
Attorney-General.
